

No musician can truly quit music, because music isn't something a musician does, music is who they ARE.

www.musiciansunite.com

It's OK to take some time away, to take a break; but never try to walk away forever, because you'll regret it forever.

You can't deny who you are.

I am personally going through a terrible time! I have played (for money) since I was 12 years old... it's been a "ride" I never want it to end... but the last almost 2 years has been very tough for me!

My band, The Great American Songbook, started back about 7 years ago but hasn't played a note since March the 14th, 2020... that's a long time!

We had a fantastic run at La Bodega Ajijic with great crowds every Tuesday night... wonderful people that became our good friends... not to mention some of the wonderful dancers... we played what they loved and they loved what we played with music from the 1940's up to the 1980's... hence the name of the band.

I have tried to play with some other guys but as the old saying goes in music... without a great audience there is no show.

I am still very positive that I'll be playing again soon... just have to find some magic dust somewhere. Guess I'm just having a break.

Always Have Fun!!
