

Edna St. Vincent Millay

Poet Edna St. Vincent Millay makes a similar point via counterpoint. In a beautiful 1920 letter to a friend, found in The Letters of Edna St. Vincent Millay (public library) — which also gave us the beloved poet on what it really means to be an anarchist, her touching appreciation of her mother, and her exquisite love letters— 28-year-old Millay writes:

I can whistle almost the whole of the Fifth Symphony, all four movements, and with it I have solaced many a whining hour to sleep. It answers all my questions, the noble, mighty thing, it is “green pastures and still waters” to my soul. Indeed, without music I should wish to die. Even poetry, Sweet Patron Muse forgive me the words, is not what music is. I find that lately more and more my fingers itch for a piano, and I shall not spend another winter without one. Last night I played for about two hours, the first time in a year, I think, and though most everything is gone enough remains to make me realize I could get it back if I had the guts. People are so dam lazy, aren’t they? Ten years I have been forgetting all I learned so lovingly about music, and just because I am a boob. All that remains is Bach. I find that I never lose Bach. I don’t know why I have always loved him so. Except that he is so pure, so relentless and incorruptible, like a principle of geometry

I hope you are enjoying these little vignettes!... Francis

A SATIRICAL CHILLER FOR THE BROADMINDED

The hysterically funny play, Dinner by Moira Buffini, will be on stage December 6-15. Get your tickets now

DINNER by Moira Buffini is a deliciously black satirical comedy on that ever-recurring theme, the dinner party from hell. Paige Janssen invites guests over for dinner to celebrate the success of her husband Lars' pop psychology book, 'Beyond Belief.' Although when Paige gives the Waiter very deliberate instructions for the evening you get the sense that this is not a typical dinner party. Paige serves up odd courses and biting commentary throughout.

One reviewer wrote of the play, "Dinner is brilliantly written with the story slowly unfolding piece by piece with nuggets of information being dangled in front of the

A strong cast of seven brings the play to life: Lynn Gutstadt as the hostess, Paige, Brian King as her husband, Lars, and the guest list includes Stan Rawson, Linda Goman, and Debra Felix, while Wayne Waterman is an unexpected visitor and Greg Custer plays the
